MOUNT HOOD.—A Boston correspondent of the San Francisco Christian Advocate writes the following:

The leap from camp meetings to such a mountain is certainly a long one, but your correspondent actually made it in a breath from Hampton. Where, and how, does some astonished reader exclaim? In Boston, good sir and lady, in front of Bierstadt. Boston is the Hub. For fifty cents you may see for six weeks this grand mountain in its finest array. Shall I try to describe the the painting for you? Presumptuous mortals! you cry. Yes, mortals are presumptuous. Hundreds now many have tried to paint in words the daily miracle of the sun's rising and setting. An Infinity forever, tous vers l'infini! In the foreground at the left is a group of fine trees green with their deep Summer luxuriance, and solemn with the still lingering shadows of the night. In the middle of the foreground is a ravine running down from the lake, but whose depths are concealed by a dense growth of wood. Next to the right is an open space where a herd of deer are partly browsing and partly asleep. At the extreme right of the foreground is a mass of gray rocks, and a clump of trees whose trunks and boughs, like the illuminated edges of a cloud, are transfigured with the soft light of morning, and through whose foliage is seen an abrupt rock shooting up, gray, steep and massive. Beyond this rock the eye catches a view of lesser peaks, that seem white with accumulated snows and hastening away into the distance, as though anxious not to come into comparison with Hood. Directly before the ravine and open space sleeps a lake as calm as the silent winds and sentinel mountains can make it, as the luminous above it and dreamy azure exhalation which you dare not call a mist, lest the reader's ideal become too misty, can render it, spreading all over the surface. Toward the left of the lake a volcanic rock rises dark and cold, as if it were just projected by earthquake force above the calm water. Beyond the lake rises up in the middle ground the wooded sides of the great mountain, scarred by vast ravines, while here and there gleams of descending streams enliven the prospect. One of these pours its flood over a high rock and falls at last, a stream of silver, through a cloud of still more silvery vapor to the lake below.

From this girdle of green forest Hood soars in conscious majesty toward heaven. The mountain is clad in the snows of ages, through whose dazzling whiteness here and there appears the ragged summit of a cliff. Three long ridges of rock run from the wooded belt toward the summit. Those on the right and left form shoulders to the mountain's head, while the middle ridge rears in solitary grandeur against the sky. Along those ridges the painter makes his finest display of color, and sharpest contrasts of light and shade. Along each ridge lies the dazzling whiteness of the snow, which here and there changes to russet hues under the sunbeams. Under each ridge, just beyond the line of spotless white, is the dense shadow; first grayish, next deep purple, then black as night.

The effect of the painting is excellent. With fewer of the splendid effects of coloring than are seen in Lander's Peak, there seems to be in this more unity and intensity of impression. Here the mountain leaps up with sublime energy to heaven, a breath of awe overspreads its inaccessible height, and an air of mystery shrouds its unmelting snows. One almost fancies he hears its voice of minatory warning, procul, procul, este profani!

SPEED OF RAILROAD TRAINS.—The Great Western Express to Exeter, England, travels at the rate of forty three miles an hour, including stoppages, or fifty miles an hour without including stoppages. To attain this rate, a speed of sixty miles an hour has been reached. A speed of seventy miles an hour is about equivalent to thirty yards per second, or thirty-five yards between two beats of a common clock. All objects near the eye of a passenger traveling at this rate will pass by his eye in the thirty-fifth part of a second, and if thirty-five stakes were erected at the side of the road, a yard asunder, they would not be distinguishable one from another. If painted red, they would appear collectively a continued flash of color. If two trains of this speed passed each other, the relative velocity would be seventy yards per second, and if one of the trains were seventy yards long, it would pass by in a single second. Supposing the locomotive which draws such a train to have driving-wheels seven feet in diameter, those wheels will revolve five times in a second. The valve moves and the steam escapes ten times in a second, but as there are two cylinders which act alternately, there are really twenty puffs or escapes of steam in a second. The locomotives can be heard to "cough" when moving slowly, the cough being occasioned by the abrupt emission of waste steam up the chimney, but twenty coughs per second cannot be separated by the ear, their individuality being lost. Such a locomotive speed is equal to one-fourth of a cannon ball, and the momentum of the whole train, moving at such a speed, would be nearly equivalent to the aggregate force of a cannon ball equal to one-fourth of the weight of the train.

GEN. LOGAN ON SLAVERY AND EDUCATION.—We look in vain through the Southern States for public schools. Ignorance sits enthroned where the flowers bloom in mid winter and waste their fragrance on the desert air. Why is this so? The riddle is easily read. The educated will think and if his heart is educated he will feel; and out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. Surely, then, that same law that made it a legal crime to educate a slave must, in the inexorable spirit of the theory, oppose the education of any and every body who, per possibility, may become the friend of the slave, the people of the South have resolved to perpetually persist in holding on to this institution, pursued a political plan to prevent the spread of education. Can any man fail to see or fail to feel that any institution, the interest of which must make such exactions, is bound to be a country's curse? Lycurgus, who was a great and good lawgiver in his day and generation, insisted that children are the property of the State. There is but one use to which the State can put children, that is to educate them. Intelligence is Heaven's rarest gift to earth; it is the attribute that gives man a claim to an affinity with angels, and that is false to its most sacred truth, that fails to develop all of her moral resources. Had a wise system of popular education been adopted at the South at the same time it was at the North, that section might not have been to-day, as it really is, without the light of a single great mind to guide it through the wilderness of its troubles. Attribute, if you please, the degradation in which is found buried the Southern mind either to a jealousy of education or the selfishness of affluence, and still it is the institution of slavery that causes it.

CURIOUS KIND OF QUARTERMASTER'S STORES.—The storekeeper in the Quartermaster's Department at Camp Douglas, while engaged yesterday in opening a case of clothing, found one parcel not enumerated in the invoice. After removing about half the contents of the case, there appeared a parcel wrapped in brown paper, and the appearance of the outside being so different from the packages of shirts, drawers, etc., which is usually received, that the suspicions of our friend [illegible] were suddenly aroused. He at once summoned the clerk and [illegible] master, when a consultation was held as to the probable contents of the said mysterious-looking parcel. One imagined an infernal machine dropped in by some malignant rebel, another surmised a package of Dr. Blackburn's yellow fever argument, while [illegible] O'Donnell, summoning all his courage, very carefully lifted the parcel and seeing that it did not "go off," opened the same, when [illegible] what do you think he found [illegible] therein? Why, it was a moderate [illegible] There was astonishment depicted on the countenances of the trio, but on a more minute examination their surprise became suddenly changed to merriment, when an address upon the [illegible] placard was found, and which [illegible] read [illegible] Mrs. Brigham Young, the [illegible]

[illegible] DEMOCRATIC VICTORY [illegible] that [illegible] Fairfax, a democrat, was elected supervisor [illegible] Marion county, California at a special election. At the regular election he tied [illegible] Charles beat him a second heat. [illegible] that the [illegible] ornery is not yet dead.

A tender hearted railway engineer [illegible] railroad says he never runs over a man if he can help it because it musses up the track.

The Daily Oregonian.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE

THURSDAY MORNING, NOV. 23, 1865

THE LESSON OF THE ELECTIONS.—We notice in our exchanges a considerable variety of opinion as to the nature of the lesson taught by the Eastern elections. Some have asserted that the result in New York, Pennsylvania and the other great States is an unqualified endorsement of the President's plan of dealing with the Southern States and Southern people while others claim that the popular verdict of the whole North is unequivocally against the "experiment" of reconstruction that has been tried for months without the success that was hoped for and anticipated. While we willingly acknowledge that the President's Southern policy is dictated by what appears to him to be the very best considerations for the public welfare, it would be idle to deny that it fails to satisfy a very large number of the best friends of the country. That class of earnest patriots to whom our Government owes its preservation, have not from the first entirely approved the course which the Executive saw fit to take in the matter of restoring lawful authority throughout the South. At first they did not vehemently oppose the President's plan, both because of the peculiar circumstances under which Mr Johnson came to the Presidential chair, and because they did not wish to deal ungenerously with him at the critical hour when he assumed the extraordinary responsibilities of his high office. And besides, though it was feared that failure would ensue from the attempt to rehabilitate the State governments by using for that purpose the disloyal material of which the political society of the South is composed, the Radicals, so called, were willing to give the matter a trial, and therefore did not protest against the President's plan. But after having witnessed the unsatisfactory results which flowed from the reinstatement of disloyal men to power the true supporters of the Government began to insist on the adoption of a more vigorous policy. In this they were opposed, as usual, by the Copperheads, who now pronounced in favor of free pardons, and urged that the yet rebellious States should be placed entirely under the control of the same classes who but very lately had been in arms against the Government.

The Copperheads pretended to sanction the President's plan; but while they did this they went much further, and advocated measures which, if adopted, would have resulted in the loss of all the country has gained by the struggle it has passed through. The Unionists did not fully endorse all the President has done. They urged in their State platforms and resolutions that there ought to be a very considerable modification or change in the administration of the Government in the South. They did not come squarely to an issue with the President for the reason that he has always manifested a willingness to alter his course and modify his "experiment" to suit exigencies as they arise. Hence, there is no room for an irreconcilable quarrel between themselves and the Executive. The President is not immovably fixed in the course he has pursued, but like his predecessor of glorious name, is willing to listen to the wishes of his loyal supporters. He will take counsel from the people and then decide what ought to be done. He does not regard it as a proof of hostility in any one to oppose his policy, but on the contrary by taking them into his counsel often shows his appreciation of those who think differently from himself.

In our opinion the late elections are to be taken, not as an indication that the people are entirely at cross purposes with the President, but as a sign that they wish some changes made in his Southern policy. This, the President will not be slow to perceive, nor will he hesitate, we think, to shape his course accordingly. These elections must, and ought to exercise a marked influence upon his future course. He cannot afford to run counter to the loyal sense of the nation. He has never manifested a purpose to do so. He knows he can gain nothing by turning his back upon his friends and those of the country, giving up his administration to the counsels of his whilom enemies. The people call for a more stringent Southern policy than that hitherto pursued. We believe their call will prevail. But if it do not—if there is to be an irremediable quarrel between Congress and the President, as many say there will, but which we do not believe, we shall soon know all about the grounds of dispute and witness the issue of the controversy.

THE NEGRO SUFFRAGE ORGAN.—In its prospectus, the Oregonian comes out in favor of negro suffrage, as follows:

> The cardinal doctrine of the natural equality of human rights, and the principle that all men without distinction of color or caste, "should be equal before the law," will be firmly adhered to.
> The Oregonian will have a good time preaching that doctrine to the Union men of Oregon.—Statesman.

Neither the paragraph quoted above, nor anything else ever published in the OREGONIAN, implies that this paper favors negro suffrage in Oregon. It is worthy of notice, however, that the Statesman, in its zeal for the common cause of itself and its Copperhead associates, no longer believes in "the cardinal doctrine of the natural equality of human rights." Is more conclusive proof needed that that paper is sold to the service of the admirers of human slavery? What else means its renunciation of the great principle for which LINCOLN lived and died? Truly the Statesman is very zealous in the cause of its "new party" when it denies that all men ought to be free and that they "should be equal before the law." Why, "Liberty and Union" are the great results of our late struggle. The Statesman "will have a good time preaching" slavery and denying liberty before the Union men of Oregon.

SALEM LITERATURE.—We have taken some pains to collect specimens of "polite literature" from the Salem papers. The following comes from the Statesman: "Silliest lie we ever read"—"Lies that a fool would not believe"—"Stupid falsehoods"—"Downright lying"—"Silly falsehoods and pointless blackguardisms"—"Made up lies which issue from an evil heart"—"Set you down as a liar and a fool"—"Knowingly tells a falsehood"—"Would steal acorns from a blind hog"—"Chaffy lies," &c., &c.

The following from the Review: "Poor simpleton"—"Writes nonsense"—"Has no brains"—"Asses in lion skins"—"Beast Butler"—"Give their worthless and cowardly carcasses a kick," &c., &c.

The above "exhibit" is from a single issue of each of the above papers, and does not half exhaust their contents. The Review and Statesman seem to be vieing with each other in the use of their peculiar and elegant vocabulary.

"PREVENT IT."—The OREGONIAN is out in a "hefty" "stick full" against the repeal of the specific contract act.—Statesman.

A little while ago the Statesman was out in four columns of maudlin stuff which it called 'arguments,' in favor of the repeal of the law. Readers will be able to appreciate the difference between the "stick full" of sensible matter which we published against the repeal of the law, and the almost inexhaustible quantity of "flapdoodle" that was poured out through the columns of the Statesman in the endeavor to prove that paper is better money than gold.

The Walla Walla Statesman says that "the projectors of the annexation movement are satisfied that a majority of the people living in the Valley are opposed to the measure, and hence have abandoned the agitation."

What Manufactures Achieve.

We have repeatedly urged that one of the great, if not indeed the greatest, of the wants of Oregon and the whole Pacific coast, is a more extensive system of manufactures than has yet been instituted here. This important branch of business ought to be as progressive as the other industrial interests of the country. In proportion as our State grows in wealth enabling the people to engage in various enterprises manufactures ought to be a prime object of attention. Though Oregon possesses uncommon facilities as a manufacturing country, those pursuits are neglected for others which seem to promise better remuneration, but which are far less permanent, both as to the character of the pursuits themselves and also in the profits they yield. Oregon needs above all things to increase her activity in the several branches of manufacture which may be adapted to the country. For its future prosperity and permanent greatness, our State must rely on manufactures as well as on commerce and inland trade.

Many splendid cities have been reared by commerce, but manufactures have done great things as well. Commerce has made New York, New Orleans, San Francisco and other great cities, but manufactures have almost entirely built up such places as Pittsburg and Cincinnati, and even Philadelphia and Boston. They have built such cities as Lowell, Lawrence, Troy and the thousand flourishing places which are found throughout the Eastern, Middle and even the Western States. Manufactures support a very large share of our population, and give great strength to the whole country. They play a most important part in our political economy, as the thriving condition of our manufacturing communities fully attests.

A late number of the Philadelphia North American has the following excellent article on this subject which we commend to the attention of those who desire to promote the welfare of our State:

> When we advocate the devotion of more care and attention to manufactures we ask our people to do that which will enlarge villages into cities and expand small cities into immense metropolitan centres of population and business. In such a movement as this every class of the community is directly interested. It gives the farmer a better home market for his produce, the tradesman an increased demand for his goods, the real estate owner an ampler return on his investment and, in fact all kinds of civilized craftsmen the means not only of making a good living and accumulating a competence but of rearing up splendid fortunes.
>
> Let a cotton factory or an iron foundry be put in full operation at a country village, and immediately the village becomes a town of very decided importance. Let it be located in any suitable part of a town like Philadelphia, and immediately every house in the neighborhood acquires an increased value, on account of the demand for dwellings by the operatives. A commercial city may be squeezed into a very limited space, as in the case of New York, while a manufacturing city inevitably requires a great deal of room and verge enough. The operatives employed in the latter live in comfortable dwellings, while the sailors, the longshoremen and the hangers on of commerce seem to ignore such advantages.
>
> Manufactures give patronage and support to our schools of learning; they encourage the education of the masses, they are the soul of all the improvements in agriculture and commerce. If we understand the tendency of civilization, manufactures constitute its predominant trait, and should receive the chief attention of any people aspiring to the highest development, as we do in the United States. The policy which would induce us to neglect the great interest and hang our hopes of greatness merely upon agriculture and commerce, is such as might please the great industrial interests of England, but should be regarded as opposed to our permanent prosperity.
>
> The Western States, we are happy to perceive, have at length entered fully into this policy of encouraging domestic industry, and the West is now not less anxious for protection than any other section of the country. The vast copper, iron and lead resources of Michigan, Illinois and Missouri have led to the establishment of industrial works in those regions, to use the ores dug from those mines. So, too, the enormous demand for woolen goods during the war caused a great increase in the woolen mills of the West, as the Kentucky tobacco trade has induced the establishment of flourishing tobacco factories in all the western cities.
>
> What manufactures have done for New England and the Middle States in former years they are in process of doing for the West, and the Western agriculturists, fully appreciating the value of the home market for the produce which is thus needed, understand the subject far better than they ever did before and are investing their spare capital in the manufacturing concerns starting up in their vicinage. So it should be everywhere and with every man. Our capital should go to increase the productive capacity of our industrial establishments, and our policy should foster this interest.

The Statesman of Walla Walla gives the following items:

Notwithstanding the lateness of the season, trains continue to fit out for Blackfoot. The inducements to go through are so great that the owners of trains are willing to take the chances of being snowed in on the mountains. From Lewiston, we have heard of as high as fifty cents per pound being asked and obtained for packing to Helena. The figures from this place have not as yet ruled so high. The opinion has been expressed that the trail will be kept open all winter, and communication with the mines continue uninterrupted.

Just at this time there is not a vacant house of any description to be found in Walla Walla. At a time when the towns below us are deserted this demand for houses is extraordinary, and is the best evidence of the remarkable prosperity of the town.

The Blue Mountains have assumed a wintry garb, the summits being capped with snow. The weather in the valley continues pleasant, but on the mountain tops grim visaged winter holds sway.

Another drove of sheep, numbering 1,500, passed through town last Saturday en route for the Touchet. Who knows but Walla Walla may yet be one of the chief wool growing countries?

> Not willing that each State shall manage its own affairs the Oregon Statesman takes it upon itself to decide the general question of suffrage for all parts of the country. We greatly hope we shall not soon have negro suffrage in Oregon, because we want to be spared the disgusting spectacle of seeing the Statesman Olympic Review circle running about over the State within six months, after the enfranchisement of the blacks, declaring in order to secure the colored vote that they have negro blood flowing in their veins.—Oregonian.

After proving [?] that a greenback dollar is better than a gold dollar because it is the "promise of a government to pay a gold dollar," in the course of time, it is but fair to presume that they would set at defiance the laws of nature and common sense and prove by a similar style of logic that a negro is better than a white man, because he promises to be a white man if he ever gets bleached out. In less than a month they would quit lecturing the members of the Legislature and commence harping about the "superiority of the negro."—State Journal.

THE EXPRESS BUSINESS.—The profitableness of the express business was newly illustrated last week by the declaration of a handsome extra dividend, over which the lucky shareholders of the American Express Company's stock are rejoicing considerably. This company paid, in 1864, dividends on a capital of two million dollars amounting to thirty eight per cent in cash and fifty per cent in paid up stock. On the capital thus increased to three millions of dollars, it has already declared in 1865, cash dividends of twenty six per cent, and twenty five per cent in stock, with every reasonable prospect of an additional twenty five per cent within the coming four months. What wonder then, that the stock of this institution is now marketable at three times its par value.—New York paper.

COAL OIL.—We are informed that a carboniferous substance, differing in no essential particular from ordinary bituminous coal, except that it has to be heated before it will start to burn has been found in the neighborhood of Warm Spring Agency. It is probably a bituminous shale and may indicate the presence of coal oil in paying quantities in that vicinity. If there is a "coal oil smeller" in the country his services should be engaged to smell out the exact location of the oil in that vicinity. It would be a good thing in a pecuniary way if a subterranean cavern filled with the illuminating fluid, did exist, and it is well worth looking after by persons interested in the business.—Mountaineer.

HIGH WATER.—The streams to the south are all unusually high. Yesterday the Salem mail of the day before succeeded in reaching here. The telegraph operator at Albany informs the operator here that the mail has passed Eugene City since Saturday. The telegraph worked yesterday as far as Oakland. It will work through to San Francisco in a day or two.

The coal taken from Monongahela collieries in twenty years amounts to 13,097,551 tons. These collieries extend over an area of about 200 square miles.

MILITARY CHANGE.—Col George B Curry, commanding the Department of the Columbia, has been mustered out of the service. Lieut Col Drake has taken command.

Next spring there will be fifteen quartz mills in operation at Owyhee. We shall have "returns" from that district next year.

The Blackfoot Mines.

The Walla Walla Statesman publishes the following letter concerning the Blackfoot country:

WALLA WALLA, Nov 15th 1865.

MR EDITOR:—Having recently arrived from the heart of the far famed Blackfoot country and having derived a good deal of experience from a sojourn of over a year and a half there, it has occurred to me that a few lines might not be uninteresting to your readers.

Much has already been said as to its favor and no doubt more will continue to be said, but as yet I have seen no report that has placed it [illegible] what it really is—the richest and most extensive gold diggings ever discovered on this coast since the early days of California. Quartz mills have already found their way to within a few miles of the summit of the eastern side of the Rocky Mountains and more are on their way, having been ordered during the past season.

McClellan Gulch, on this side, and Alder Gulch on the eastern slope are as yet the richest placer diggings which have been discovered, but many other gulches nearly if not quite as good are known to exist on both sides. In Last Chance on this side, a fine piece worth eighteen hundred and seventy six dollars, was picked up by one of the fortunate owners.

The climate during the winter, owing to the great altitude and northern position is of course very severe, but the working season is much longer than many suppose having lasted nearly six months last year. Through the past winter many poor fellows were severely frost bitten and having been among the number, I can speak all the more feelingly. To this incident I owe my present visit to your beautiful valley having come for the purpose of receiving proper medical treatment.

Last winter provisions were very high, flour two dollars per pound and everything else in proportion, while the lovers of the weed were required to fork over a cool fifteen dollars per pound for tobacco. But as I met upwards of four thousand pack animals on the way, I presume there will be a different state of affairs this winter.

While crossing the Spokane river or rather just as I reached this side I was through the polite attentions of a gentleman commonly known as Irish Jim, relieved of all my loose cash and the further necessity of taking care of my own mule having received a blow from a stone on the left temple, which left me insensible for a long time awakening to the sad reality that I was alone, without either money, blankets or mules. In case any of your readers may happen to see the mule, I may mention that he is a brown one fourteen and a half hands high, and branded on the left shoulder with the letter A., and at the same time I would state that I will gladly pay any one fifty dollars who will return him.

Now, my dear sir, having already trespassed upon your time and space, and trusting and firmly believing that very many will realize their expectations in the Blackfoot country, I remain,

Very truly yours,

PETER MILLER.

J. M. BACON, County Clerk.

THE EMPRESS OF AUSTRIA.—The wife of Francis Joseph is one of the most beautiful women of Europe, and famed equally for the kindness of her temper and the charms of her manner. She is tall, slender, graceful, with a very white skin and when pretty well, a good deal of color, large limpid blue eyes and an amazing head of very light hair, which she wears in eight massive braids, wound round and round her head, forming a magnificent diadem of hair, such as very few women could match from their own resources. She speaks all the principal tongues of Europe and is particularly fond of the English language, which she speaks perfectly, as though it were her native dialect. She is an excellent musician, paints and draws extremely well, and is one of the boldest and most skillful of horsewomen.

DWARF ELEPHANTS.—A pair of dwarf elephants not much larger than Newfoundland dogs, recently arrived in London from the interior of Africa. They are extraordinary curiosities, and the first of the breed brought to England. One of them was bought by the Royal Zoological Gardens, Regent's Park, London, and the other was bought by Mr Barnum's agent, for the new museum. The cost of the little creature was 1,000 pounds, being equal as gold now stands, to $11,200. This curious animal left London for New York, in charge of the keeper, in the ship Daniel Webster on the 18th of September.

WEB FOOT WEATHER.—On Monday and Tuesday of this week the denizens of Walla Walla Valley were favored with regular web-foot weather. With occasional intervals, the rain came down in torrents, and everything like vision was obscured by an impenetrable mist. A waggish friend thinks that the visitation is only a foretaste of what we may expect in the event of being annexed to Oregon. If this is one of the first fruits of the proposed union with Oregon, we beg to be "counted out" on the annexation question.—Walla Walla Statesman.

THE FINAL CONFLAGRATION.—It is not a little remarkable that the predicted burning of the world and the circumstances attending it, as foretold in Scripture are both natural, and have a strict coincidence with scientific probability. It is computed by French astronomers that more than fifteen hundred fixed stars have disappeared within the last three centuries. [illegible] says that one of these stars, situated in the Northern hemisphere, gave the most indisputable evidence of having been consumed. It was so bright as to be visible to the naked eye at mid day. First of a dazzling white, then of a reddish yellow, and lastly of an ashy pale [illegible]. The conflagration lasted sixteen months, when the star forever disappeared.

The what is it is dead. For the information of those good people who were backed down by Barnum, they at first offering to bet that it was an idiot negro boy, will be pleased to know that it was a negro girl. She shuffled off her imbecile coil some time last spring, while on exhibition in the West.

[illegible] River Mines.—Mr Julien of the [illegible] in this city, has permitted us to copy [illegible] letter received from Mr Park Winans [illegible] 5th, 1866: "The news from [illegible] is good. Mines and Mills at South Boise.—Mr. [illegible] Green Whiteford from South Boise last week after an extended examination of mining interests there. We derive the following notes from him.

The Wallingham company's smash [illegible] on the 28th, amounting to 100 feet, and [illegible] as I have seen in the Territory. [illegible] to work three [illegible] of the [illegible] proprietors, who [illegible] is looking fine and doing work of twenty [illegible] under the superintendence of Mr. Wilson Wallingham. This [illegible] 150 tons of [illegible] crushing. The mill is 50 [illegible] with [illegible] forty stamps, and was manufactured in New York. The Victor Company's Mill in Red Warrior is running ten stamps and two [illegible] grinders, working thirty [illegible] per day from the Richmond and New York mine. I was shown the amalgam taken out in one week's run which was estimated at $[illegible] This company is doing well and from the appearance of their [illegible] I think they will continue to do well. The whole is under the superintendence of Capt. E. D. Nelson, who will omit nothing that would be of benefit to his company. The mill was manufactured at the Union Foundry, San Francisco. The New York mine is prospected to a depth of 105 feet. It is about five feet wide. The W. B. Benson mill will be running next week. It is being substantially put up under the superintendence of Mr. Harris. They have some fine looking ore from the Wide West mines. Mr. Harris has gone to considerable expense in prospecting his lead by running a tunnel some two hundred feet, but has not yet struck the ledge. The Red Warrior Tunnel Company have run in about 115 feet and are starting the finest tunnel I have seen in Idaho Territory in tending to strike blind lodes. The Idaho and New York Company's Mill has been standing still for the past three weeks under attachment for debt contracted in building, but the creditors have [illegible] and raised the attachment and appointed Rasey Biven as receiver. The mill was to begin work on Monday last.—Idaho World, Nov. 11th.

Great Fire at Constantinople.—The London News, of September 25th, says

Roughly estimated it may be said that the disaster has laid waste nearly a quarter of the whole area of Constantinople proper, destroying it is estimated, about 8,000 houses, nearly twenty mosques, ten baths, five Christian churches and some fifteen Khans. No such calamity has befallen Constantinople during the present century, if indeed since the conquest. Nearly half the space thus reduced to a desert of ashes was inhabited by the poorest Mussulman population, fifteen or twenty thousand of whom are thus reduced to absolute want. With its usual promptitude the Government has not lost an hour in dealing with what relief it can to the poorest of the sufferers. Shelter has been given to nearly half of them in the empty Kahns and other available buildings and most of the remainder have been camped under tents in the Hippodrome till wooden huts or other accommodation can be found. A ration of bread is also being served out to them at the Porte's expense, and in short every effort that the pinched means of the Government will allow is being made to relieve the distress which the calamity has occasioned."

A Faithful Officer.—About every human being in the United States of the years of discretion, has probably seen the name of F. E. Spinner printed on the national currency, with the official title of Treasurer of the United States. The man that answers to that name has been in many important financial offices in the course of his life, and served three terms in Congress on the Committee of Accounts, and one of those terms was chairman of that committee. For five years he has never been absent from his post a day, and like a good man mourning for his country's misfortunes, never entered a place of amusement during the war, although often importuned to do so. He has paid out all the moneys of the most gigantic war on record, and his accounts balance to a dollar.

On Powder river, between Montana and the Missouri, recently the Second California Volunteer Cavalry found six hundred gray horses tied to a picket line and shot through the head. They were supposed to be extra horses belonging to Colonel Cole's Sixth Missouri regiment. The saddles were burnt, and also a wagon. They thought that the animals had been purposely destroyed to prevent their falling into the hands of the Indians. A very large Indian camp had been there. General Connor dispatched scouts to ascertain the cause of the killing of the horses and the burning of the saddles and wagon.

Captain Clark, of the Norfolk Post, tells the following tough story about the weather in this city, July 5th:

"The heat was so intense yesterday that several individuals were melted, and have entirely disappeared. We watched our thermometer until it run up some hundreds, when we [illegible] seized it and doused the 'darnd thing' into the water [illegible]. We fixed that thermometer. It was below zero in a minute, and the weather gradually cooled down."

A good story is told of Mr. Newton, of the Agricultural Department—the same gentleman who knew not the distinction between hydraulic rams and sheep of the masculine gender. Once he was brought before a sub-committee of the Ways and Means, to explain the unusual [illegible] expenses of his Department. "How comes it, Mr. Newton," asked Justin M. Morrill, "that the expenses of your Department have overrun your estimates so much?" Leaning over the table, and thrusting his finger through Mr. Morrill's button hole, the benevolent looking old man slowly said, in his lowest and most impressive tones, "The truth is, Mr. Morrill, the expenses of my Department for the past year have surpassed my most sanguine expectations." The explanation was too good to keep and Mr. Morrill himself told it.

A Celestial Visitor Approaching.—Biela's comet, now approaching its perihelion will soon be visible. It is now distant about 110,000,000 miles. It is pursuing a southerly course and will cross the celestial equator about the middle of December. It crosses its old path of 1846 near where it separated into two comets. At the end of February its distance from the earth will be less than 20,000,000 of miles. This comet's period is about six and three quarter years.

A little girl being sent ashore to purchase some stuff, and forgetting the name of the article, said to the clerk: "John, what do folks die with?" "Why, cholera, sometimes," replied John. "Well I believe that's the name. I want to get ten cents worth."

A tradesman recently told a youth in his shop to write in large letters on a sheet of paper, "Wanted, a stout lad, as light porter." The young scapegrace, either from ignorance or design, wrote, "Wanted, a stout lad as like a porter."

Large Pigs.—A few days ago Nathan Coleman, of Siuslaw precinct, killed two pigs, raised on his farm, the smallest of which weighed 295 and the largest 310 pounds. They were of the Grazier stock, and were only 14 months old.—State Journal.

Coleridge was acknowledged to be a bad rider. One day, while riding through the street, he was thus accosted by a would be wit: "I say, do you know what happened to Balaam?" Came the answer quick and sharp: "The same has happened to me. An ass spoke to him!"

John Van Buren thinks that President Johnson asks quite enough—perhaps even a trifle too much—of the negroes, when he tells them they must respect the marriage rite and clothe themselves and their children. Really John's notion of civilization is very moderate.—Chicago Republican.

The Sub-Treasury---A Marvelous Story of Wealth

The leading financial institution in the United States is the United States Assistant Treasury at New York. Though it is only an assistant treasury and the Treasury proper is at Washington, yet the transactions of the former are vastly greater in volume than those of the latter. It is the chief work of the Washington bureau keeping record of the business done at its New York branch. Nineteen twentieths of the public creditors are paid here, nearly all of the public debt is disposed of here. By far the greater part of the revenue from customs and taxes are received here, and here is paid, on the days fixed by law, the interest on $2 000 000 000 of United States securities. A business of $5 000 000 to $10 000 000 daily is done here—done quickly, quietly and without errors or disputes. No institution in the city is better worth inspection than the Sub Treasury, and be it said in simple justice no man is more willing to have it inspected, than Mr Van Dyke, the Sub Treasurer.

The vaults are a sight which cannot be witnessed elsewhere in the country. There are two of them but one is comparatively empty, as it only holds some $10,000,000. The other contains over $60,000,000, one half in coin the other half in paper. How many readers have ever seen $1,000,000 in paper or in gold? We remember one of our oldest judges, a man of large experience and profound wisdom, interrupting a party of talkers who were chattering about millions of gold with the naive questions of "How big is a million of gold? Would it rest on this table? Would it go under this chair? How many men would it take to carry it? What does it look like?"

His Honor might have gratified his curiosity by a visit to the Sub Treasury. There $40,000,000 of gold lie dormant, awaiting the resurrection of specie payments. Those bags are piled one above another in closets which line the inner walls of the vault. A hundred bags fill a closet. When filled, the door is closed, locked and sealed with the cashier's seal, a ticket attached certifies that in that dark and narrow hole $500,000 in gold lie hidden. Fifty or more such closets may be seen duly closed, locked and sealed. But in that vault whose wealth far outshines the wildest fables of Oriental story, bags of gold lie around in every corner. You kick one as you enter. Others rest on tracks waiting sepulture in the closets. They are so plentiful, and so seemingly despised by the officials who handle them, that insensibly the spectator loses his respect for them, and forgets that the possession of a few such bags would realize the life-long dream of prosperity.

The bags are the product of custom duties. Every day, between 3 and 4 o'clock a little hand cart, ark shaped, painted red, covered over and locked, may be seen travelling up Wall street, propelled by two stout men, and winding its way from the Custom House to the Sub-Treasury. There are but two men ostensibly engaged in pushing the little red cart, but a careful observer may discover two other men, likewise stout and very watchful, who lounge up the sidewalk on a parallel line. They look as if they carried revolvers. In these days, when the custom duties are heavy, the little ark sometimes contains $750,000—a prize worth the affection of robbers. But it is never attacked. When it reaches the Sub-Treasury it is unlocked, and the bags are handed in. Each bag is then counted by the Sub-Treasurer's clerks. They count with both hands, and with a rapidity and accuracy truly wonderful. They seem to possess a sort of instinct—the product of long experience, which enables them to discover a false coin at a glance. Pieces which have been split open, the inside filed out, the cavity filled with iridium, the two halves soldered together, remilled on the edges, are so like genuine coin that the best judges are often deceived in them. They weigh precisely the same as genuine coins. They are precisely the same. They have the ring of pure gold. Their external surface throughout is gold. Yet these counterfeits are detected at a glance by the experienced clerks of the Treasury. It used to be said of Mr I. H. Birdsale, the present cashier, that when he was a clerk he could, in emptying a $5,000 bag, at a dip of his hands into the glittering mass, pick out all the spurious coins.

There is a quantity of silver in the Sub Treasury, in bags and kegs, but after one has been handling millions of gold, it seems a poor sort of metal. A silver closet holds $4,000, there are a full dozen of them full to repletion. Within a short time considerable amounts of silver have arrived here from New Orleans—the product of duty or the Confiscation Act. Many of the coins are rusted and dingy, and it is shrewdly suspected that, during the dark days of rebel supremacy these pieces slept the sleep of the just in damp, underground holes. One of the New Orleans banks is known to have buried its coin when Confederate shinplasters made their appearance, and the plan was doubtless adopted by many private individuals.

Of paper money the Sub Treasury in New York holds some forty millions. Of this over eighteen millions are in fives, tens and twenties and are piled on a shelf in the vault. As nearly as we could calculate by the eye there is about a cord and a half of this money. It might fill a two horse hay cart. When a paymaster calls with a draft, the clerks give him a trunkful or a bushel basket. The notes are legal tenders and national bank notes mixed indiscriminately—some old and worn, showing evidence of long service, others new and crisp.

The largest notes, $100, $500, $1,000 have the honor of a closet room. There is a closet there which contains a half a dozen millions. Lying on the top of a mountain of these notes was a package which we examined. It could easily have been put in the coat pocket and carried away without any inconvenience. It contains one thousand $500 legal tenders, and was, therefore, just half a million. But for the contempt of money which the inspection of these enormous sums is apt for a moment to inspire, one might have coveted this little package. How many able and successful men toil for a life time in the hope of acquiring just such a parcel.

But, if you are going to steal, gentle reader, let us recommend coupons as the most convenient article to "convey." Seven-Thirty coupons are so small that you can easily put $50,000 worth in your waist-coat pocket, and as to Ten-Forty coupons, a pinch of them, between finger and thumb, is a small fortune. These little bits of paper, no bigger than apothecary's labels, or half the size of a five cent in fractional currency, representing sums varying from $25 in gold to $365 in currency. As interest day comes around they pour in from all quarters—from the far West and the lately rebellious South, from Germany and Holland; from crowned heads in Europe and from industrious washerwomen in this country. To examine and sort these little bits of paper is no slight task. One of the richest men in New York is said to keep his daughters, married and single, busy cutting off coupons for a whole afternoon and evening before interest day, when the cutting is done the eldest daughter herself sweeps out the room to intercept waifs and estrays.

The vaults of the Sub Treasury may really be said to defy burglars. In the first place they are built on thirty feet of solid masonry, so that digging under them and working by a tunnel to the floor would be impracticable. Then, they stand in the main hall of the treasury building, in which a watch is always kept and to which it would require no small labor to intrude after nightfall. The vaults themselves are iron chambers with iron floors, roofs and walls. The latter are two feet thick, and hollow, the hollow being filled with musket balls, which defy the burglar's drill. Four doors of massive iron close the entrance to the vault; each door is locked with two locks and that eight different keys of peculiar mechanism are required to open the same. Uncle Sam, poor fellow! is not likely to be robbed at this office, however he may fare elsewhere.

A HINT TO SOMEBODY.—Lying upon the table before us is a scrap of an English manufactured material called Winsey. The substance is of wool and cotton, and is largely used in great Britain as dress material for women of all ranks and conditions, being made of various grades and fineness. Some of these textures are coarse as ordinary "linsy woolsey," others elegant in the beauty of their fabric. A quality that sells in this market for one dollar and a half a yard rates in England at two shillings and sixpence. We are not aware that any of the material is produced in the United States, being informed it was not. To the raw material of cotton and wool the city of Pittsburgh is in happy neighborhood, while her facilities for manufacturing them are indisputable. The markets of consumption are such that to whatever point of the compass the material is shipped from here, a saving equal to two freights is made on fabrics manufactured of similar staples in the New England States and one over those sold by importers on the sea coast, while the cost of manufacturing is with good machinery no more, if not less. Was the manufacture of this material commenced here there is but little doubt if taken hold of with proper energy, that Pittsburgh would in a short time become as famous for Winseys as for steel. If somebody who is looking for a fortune will take up this hint and examine it, he may find the object of his search.—Pittsburgh Trade Circular.

FEET AS IS FEET.—The Copperopolis Courier tells the following:

Antone Weiz is now at work on a pair of boots for a gentleman living near town, and will finish them sometime next week. The length of the boot is thirteen inches and the sole is seven inches wide. His instep is seventeen inches around. Such feet must certainly be dangerous to everything that crawls.

Manufactories

A Lowell, Massachusetts paper, under date of Sept [illegible], says the manufacturing companies of that city are increasing their productions of goods as fast as the additional help necessary to enable them to do it can be obtained. In some instances messengers have been dispatched to Canada and to distant parts of the New England States to procure operatives. The efforts of these agents have been partially successful, although there is an actual scarcity of experienced operatives, who are willing to vacate new fields of labor opened since the commencement of the war to resume their old positions in the factories. New beginners in considerable numbers are coming into the city every week. Below we give the number of operatives employed by the different incorporated manufacturing establishments of the city together with the kinds of goods manufactured. The statement of the number employed is as nearly correct as is possible considering the fact that changes are constantly taking place.

Lawrence Manufacturing Company.—Number of operatives employed: Males 250, females, 400, total 650. Fifty thousand yards of sheetings and shirtings and four thousand dozen pairs of hosiery are manufactured by this company per week, at the present time. Shirtings and sheetings and hosiery of cotton and wool are the only goods at present manufactured by this company.

Fremont Mills.—Number of operatives employed, 600. Goods manufactured—shirtings, sheetings, denims, cotton flannel and heavy wool on shirtings. Four hundred and fifty cotton weavers are now in the mill of the company. Three hundred additional hands could here find employment.

Suffolk Manufacturing Company.—Number of hands employed 400. Goods manufactured, fancy cassimeres and flannels, cotton sheetings etc.

Merrimack Manufacturing Company.—Operatives employed on cotton work—males, 238, females 981, total 1,219; number employed on print works—males, 185, females, 26, total, 211. Goods manufactured, printing cloths and calicoes.

Boott Cotton Mills.—Operatives employed, 700. Goods manufactured, printing cloths, drills, fine sheetings and shirtings.

Massachusetts Cotton Mills.—Operatives employed—males, 173, females, 305, total, 478. Goods manufactured, heavy sheetings.

Prescott Cotton Mills.—(Owned by same Company) Operatives employed—males, 70 females, 150, total, 220. Goods manufactured, fine sheetings.

Middlesex Company.—Operatives employed, 800. Goods manufactured, shawls, ladies' cloths, cassimere beavers, etc.

Hamilton Manufacturing Company.—Operatives employed—cotton works, 1,000, in print works, 200. Goods manufactured, delaines, balmorals, cotton flannels, tickings, stripes, prints, armures.

Appleton Company.—Operatives employed—males, 120, females, 300. Goods manufactured, sheetings and shirtings Nos 13, 17 and 22.

HOW IT IS DONE.—Last summer a bank clerk in New York stole $100,000. He lost the money by "fighting the tiger." He then called for a lawyer and informed him that he was a ruined man, and thought of suicide. This led to the following dialogue:

"How much does your defalcation amount to?"

"One hundred thousand dollars."

"Got any of it left?"

"Not a cent."

"That's bad; you have nothing left to work with."

"What must be done?"

"You must return to your desk and abstract another hundred thousand!"

"What must I do that for?"

"To preserve your character and save you from going to the State Prison. With the hundred thousand dollars you are to steal to-morrow I intend to compromise with the bank. Your stealing after to-morrow will amount to two hundred thousand dollars. I will call at the bank and confess your offence. I will represent myself as your heart broken uncle 'honest but poor,' I will offer the bank fifty thousand dollars to hush up the matter. The bank will accept. This will leave fifty thousand dollars to divide between you and me—that is twenty five thousand apiece. With this sum you can retire from business."

The young man listened and took in wisdom. He doubled his defalcation and compromised as the lawyer said he should. He is now worth two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and is counted "one of the most respectable gentlemen in the city of New York."

EXCITING INCIDENT AT NIAGARA FALLS.—Professor Ruggles of Dartmouth College, had a narrow escape at Niagara Falls, recently. While walking on Goat Island in company with some ladies, one of them lost her parasol, which dropped some ten or fifteen feet down the bank of the river. The Professor went down and picked it up, but on attempting to return, the bank being steep and the ground hard, lost his footing and fell down to the very brink of the precipice, which, at this point, is eighty or ninety feet high. Here he caught hold of the roots of an upturned tree, the trunk of which hangs over the abyss. The shock caused the tree to shake violently, and appeared on the point of falling over the precipice. The ladies shrieked and called for help, but no assistance was at hand. A movement on the part of Mr Ruggles, or a gust of wind, seemed sufficient to cause the tree to fall.

At this critical moment one of the ladies took off her basque and skirt, cut them into strips, got shawls and other articles of clothing from the rest of the party, tied them together, fastened a stone to the rope thus formed, and let it down to Mr Ruggles who, taking hold of it, walked slowly up the bank. It was a moment of fearful suspense. The rope was held firmly by the ladies above, but it might untie or break, and a fall of a hundred feet upon the rocks below must be the inevitable result.

When Mr Ruggles reached terra firma, his fair rescuer who had shown such remarkable presence of mind, fainted, and was carried home in an unconscious state.

HORRIBLE SCENE AT A BULL FIGHT.—A Paris correspondent gives the particulars of a sad catastrophe which occurred lately in the suburbs of Montpelier, where a bull fight had been organized in the presence of 6,000 spectators. The performance was given in a wooden structure erected in the form of an amphitheater, and while it was going on the structure gave way, hurling a mass of people into the arena where the bull was careering in full fury. A dash was made by the beast into the thickest of the crowd, a mother and child were tossed in the air, and half a dozen were frightfully gored, and the crowd got their fill of what they sought—a sensation.

FARMER'S HORSES.—Mr W C Myer, a gentleman largely interested in raising horses for agricultural and general purposes in Southern Oregon, will proceed to the Eastern and Western States by the next steamer, for the purpose of procuring the best stock that can be obtained. Mr Myer is the owner of the famous Coburg horse which together with steeds, obtained since fifteen prizes at the last Oregon fair. It would be an advantage to this State to invite Mr Myer to bring his stock for exhibition to our agricultural fairs, as he is one of the best judges of horse flesh in the Pacific coast and a most successful raiser of stock.—S. F. Flag.

APPLE MARMALADE.—Peel and cut thirty apples in slices taking out the cores, then to every pound of fruit put three quarters of a pound of sugar; put the whole in a large preserving pan with a half a spoonful of powdered cinnamon and the rind of a lemon chopped very fine. Set the pan over a sharp fire, stirring occasionally until it begins to boil, then keep stirring until it becomes rather thick. It is then done and can be poured into a basin until cold, when it is ready for use. If it is to be kept any length of time, it should be put in wide mouthed jars and covered over with paper.

The two sons of the late Senator Douglas are students in the Catholic College at Georgetown, near Washington. They are fine young men, devotedly attached to Mrs. Douglas, who it will be remembered, is not their own mother, who on the other hand has just cause to be proud of them. Their names are Stephen A., and Robert M.

FEARFULLY RIDICULOUS.—Those roues of Alexandria, Virginia, lately had a tournament in that vicinity. The object appears to have been to ridicule an institution affected by the best society, and from all accounts the affair must have been immensely funny. The costumes of the knights were fearfully and fantastically made. Miss Virginia Lewis, a young woman [illegible] spades, was the Queen of Love and Beauty, and was so crowned by Sir Levi Johnson, Knight of Arabia," who is represented as a gentleman of portly presence, and much the color of a stack of black cats. That lots the chivalry of the negroes are more than even. A [illegible] paper says that "the whole affair was devilishly infamous."

VERY FRENCH.—The latest French story is briefly this: "Monsieur X, intemperate farmer, is found dead in bed. Village physician [illegible] thirty six hours on him without [illegible]. No go. Funeral ordered, procession of villagers, chants and things. Monsieur X had money, hence citizens admire his character and also does curate, chief mourner is daughter of Monsieur X, dumb and sweet sixteen (pleasant contingent); sad ceremony goes on, coffin is about to be lowered, noise is heard inside, undertakers fly, [illegible] agonies, doctor rushes forward, M. X. steps forth alive and well but very thirsty, dumb daughter suddenly exclaims mon pere, surprise of everybody, denouement, reward of virtue."

A Tennessee paper says that "burning down a school house is about as low down in rascality as a dirty fellow can fathom." But a Connecticut Democrat got a little lower down recently, and burned a nigger school house.

A country editor, who received a severe bruise by treading on a fragment of lemon peel in New York city, has commenced a series of letters to his journal headed "My Trip on the Rhine."

A favorite question with courting men nowadays in Virginia is, "Has your father been pardoned yet, Miss?" He comes under the $20,000 clause, does he not?"—Petersburg Independent.

The bloodhounds, Hero and Jack, used to guard and rend the Union prisoners at Richmond and Andersonville have been bought by George K. Goodwin, of Boston, for $1,000.
